KEYNOTE SPEAKER:

COVID-19 pandemic has devastated the whole world including the African continent. It infected approximately 1.6 million and killed approximately 40,000 in Africa (Africa CDC).

COVID-19 has both transformed and wrecked higher education and post graduate studies alike. It forced universities world over to adopt technologies and modify pedagogical approaches. Due to COVID-19 public universities in Africa once more suffered as economies shrunk and government subsidies dwindled. In turn this devastated access, support and success in postgraduate research.

Join the keynote address of Professor John Frank Eshun the Vice-Chancellor of Takoradi Technical University in Ghana as he delivers this lecture.

Joining him is a panel of higher education practitioners and senior managers representing different African countries and higher education institutions.
