SPEAKERS: Professor Anthony Collins and Mr Mfanozelwe Shozi

Anthony Collins' work explores the ways in which violence is understood in popular, political and academic thinking, and the challenges which these ways of thinking present to effective violence reduction. They work with organisations involved with violence prevention, and support for survivors of intimate and gendered violence. This interest has also included developing new courses on violence and related social issues. They are currently the co-ordinator of the Crime, Justice and Legal Studies Honours programme at La Trobe University, Melbourne, and Honorary Research Professor at DUT.

Mr. Shozi is a lecturer at DUT Indumiso Campus under Adult and Community Unit. He has a Master's degree in Community Development from University of KwaZulu-Natal, Post-graduate Diploma in Adult Education (Natal University), Bachelor of Arts (Natal University) as well as a Bachelor of Technology in Business Administration from Technikon South Africa. He is currently finalizing his PhD at DUT-ICON. Mr. Shozi's interests are adult education, gender equality, human rights, public participation, and community development. He worked for an NGO that was involved in Adult Basic Education in the 90s which was Natal Adult Basic Education Support Agency (NASA). In the late 1990s and early 2000s, he worked as the Training Coordinator for the Centre for Public Participation. Mr. Shozi joined the Commission for Gender Equality (CGE) in 2002 as a Provincial Coordinator to coordinate the KwaZulu-Natal and Mpumalanga Provinces' activities. He was appointed by President Thabo Mbeki to serve in the Commission for Gender Equality as a Commissioner from 2007-2011. In 2012, he was appointed by President Jacob Zuma to serve the Commission for Gender Equality as both Commissioner and Chairperson from 2012-2017. He worked with various organizations in KwaZulu-Natal promoting gender, justice and democracy. Special attention was and is given in mobilising men to respect women and fully embrace gender equality in their day-to-day interactions with women.
