

Media-mad Mazwi graduates cum laude

TNA Reporter

FORMER Durban University of Technology (DUT) distinguished student, Mazwi Mgbhozi, 23, is making strides in Johannesburg's corporate jungle.

Media-mad Mazwi recently graduated cum laude, receiving the Dean's Merit Award for Academic Excellence in journalism.

The former Umlazi and South Beach man is now doing a B'Tech and is a PR executive at a national agency. He has been actively developing his craft while working on global brands such as National Geographic.

A Durbanite at heart, Mazwi loves the buzz on Florida Road, the smell of the sea and the bustle of the city – home to the Durban International Film Festival where he hopes to soak up some of the movies there next week. He grew up listening to radio stations like iGagasi, and watching CNN. Mgbhozi now interacts with clients in Washington and London on media strategy aimed at promoting their brands throughout Africa.

“A recent survey released by Millward Brown Opti-

MEDIA MANIA: Mazwi Mgbhozi, with his sister Sthombo, graduates cum laude from the DUT.

morn suggests that FOX International Channels, a key client I service with my colleagues, has three of the most recognisable TV channels globally – FOX, FX and National Geographic.

“It excites me knowing I am learning from dynamic mentors and am part of a dynamic team,” her said.

He relaxes by watching Kaizer Chiefs play. – Media Re-Imagine