

DUT fashion extravaganza

Young models strut their stuff during the annual fashion show of the Durban University of Technology's department of fashion and textiles last night. The show was held at the Fred Crookes Sport Centre on the Steve Biko Campus.

The event featured the designs of 40 third-year students, with the best 20 ranges going on show on Friday. This year's show, themed Genomorph, focuses on the development and growth of the designer. Students put together a collection of six fully accessorised garments, reflective of their personal development, style and character. The show boasts an eclectic range, from avant-garde to commercial clothing.

George Vorster, head of the department, said: 'This year's theme was open to self-interpretation, it involved experimental design and rigorous research. Morphosis is a Greek term, meaning to form or be in formation. It is a highly appropriate representation of our third-year students.'
